

SENATOR CARPENTER: One time I made the mistake.....of saying that Senator Cavanaugh laid in the aisle nobody would ever miss him. I regret that I ever made the statement. Senator Cavanaugh has done a magnificent job. He passed one of the most outstanding bills which created within the city of Omaha a new city hall. I can understand now why he didn't vote to override the Governors veto.

PRESIDENT: Its like Christmas in April.

SENATOR CAVANAUGH: Well, all I can say is that all of you who voted to override the Governor's veto, you could have had one of these had you not. Whatever it is,

PRESIDENT: The Chair understands that it is....for the E & R Attorney whose name appears on probably more pieces of paper that are shuffled across here. Senator Cavanaugh I only want to add my personal voice here to the award in that I think that you and I have exchanged more communications from the back row to the front than any other combinations of Senators here. The exchange has always been pleasant. Senator Mahoney.

SENATOR MAHONEY: Mr. President, may I have the attention of the body, and of Senator Syas.

PRESIDENT: Senator Mahoney is asking for your attention please. He is at the end of his chair. Go ahead.

SENATOR MAHONEY: Well he was talking and he drowns me out. I messed up that last time because I was supposed to have told Senator Carpenter that the presentation was for the work that Senator Cavanaugh does on E & R and I didn't get that done. I just want to be serious for a minute here and say as we leave the halls of legislature today we have certain members and colleagues who will not be back with us and whom we will miss and we will miss very, very much. Amongst that roll call would first be Senator Carpenter, Senator Snyder, Senator Nore, Senator Waldron, Senator Stromer, Senator Whitney, Senator Proud, Senator Stahmer, and Senator Fred Carstens. We at this time would like to say this, and I would just like to say these few words to them and have the men give them a hand because we truly very much miss them and in all of our deliberations and arguments and all of the other things that we do on our daily business here, and I say this to them in sincerity that man strives for glory, honor and fame a that all of the world may know his name. A massess wealth by brain and hand becomes the power in the land. That when he hears the end of life and looks back over the years of strife, he finds that a happiness depends on none of these but the love of friends. Give them a standing ovation. Wouldn't you believe it, I'll take the blame Vince, my friend Senator Fellman, I missed.

PRESIDENT: Senator Cavanaugh, your light is on, I wonder if you need to be recognized back there? Senator Cavanaugh has the floor.

SENATOR CAVANAUGH: Well since Senator Carpenter fouled his historical mode in presenting me with this, and he made a speech on a subject of which he knew nothing about, it sounded great. I didn't have the opportunity to understand
